WITHIN a few hours after these lines appear in print the Colony of Hongkong will have the pleasure of welcoming to its shores Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of CONNAUGHT. This is the third time in its history that the Colony has been honoured with the presence of representatives of the Royal Family. The first occasion was in 1869, when the Duke of EDINBURGH arrived in H.M.S. Galatea and spent a fortnight amongst us, during which time he received all the honour and entertainment the Colony had it in its power to offer. The visit was marked by the opening of the City Hall, an event of some importance in our local, history, and by an act of royal courtesy which made a deep impresson at the time and the the 4th prox. memory of which will not soon be forgotten We refer to the Duke, dressed in gurnsey Horspool, Chief Inspector of Police, has been tain's cap to distinguish thim from an ordinary tar, taking stroke oan in his own barge, to convey Admiral Sir HARRY KEPPEL off to the mail steamer by which that gallant officer signally and on probation, Mr. J. Their visit, although intended to be entirely unofficial, was marked by various festivities, on one of the evenings. Now for the third time the Colony is privileged to welcome members of the Royal Family, in the persons and the occasion is again being availed of the Throne—a sentiment which animates not only Her Majesty's subjects of British and kind in the two, the Chinese not being influenced like the British by the ties of nationality and personal affection to the Royal Family, but they are very sensible of the benef they have enjoyed under the benehas been in regard to the reception of Their Royal Highnestes, but only as to details of the pageantry, part of which it was thought by some might have been omitted without in any way detracting from the heartiness of the welcome. It would be unscomly at present to further pursue that question, but we may be allowed the satisfaction of stating that the Chinese Guilds, with that generosity which they are always ready to exercise when a matter is placed fairly bedefraying from their own proper funds, the expenses they are incurring in connection; with the Royal visit instead of raising the doubtedly at this moment in Germany, Italy. and France, especially in the latter country, is not so much a sign of strength as a proof of deliberately bending down and taking a weakness. The ruinous effects of conscription upon the business canacities of a country have already been often described, and need not here be repeated. Suffice it to say that a huge conscriptional army represents a prodigious amount of approductive labour. The same may be said of the cannon foundries and manufactories of all other warlike weapons and explosives. In France, the richest country of the Continent, the conscripts are unable to live upon their daily tumult. The head, after being severed, is jerked rations, and their food supply is supplemented up in the air by the released tension of the pole, by donations in money or provisions from their than upon the sight of the blood their vilest families. There are few French soldiers whose parents, however poor their circumstances, and most juhuman passions are aroused. They neglect to sand a donation, in some form or anact like wild beasts, clutch at the head smear each other in the face with the blood, and a other, to the representative of the family and service. This relief, which in many cases general scrimmage always ensues, resulting more amounts to a self-sacrifico-a tax-is regarded by the donors in the light of a moral and religious duty. In Italy, a very poor country, whove the soldier is not so well cared for even as in France, the generality of families are not in a position to support the additional strain that would be In the February number of the Antiquery an imposed by this act of abnegation.
